Task 4 – Answers
Chapter 9

Another minute brought another addition. The younger boy, a remarkable stout, forward child, of two years old, having got the door opened for him by some one without, made his determined appearance among them, and went (1) straight to the sofa to see what was going (2) on, and put in his claim to anything good that might be giving (3) away.

There being nothing to eat, he could only have some play; and as his aunt would not let him tease his sick brother, he began to fasten himself (4) upon her, as she knelt, in such a way that, busy as she was about Charles, she could not shake him (5) off. She spoke to him, ordered, entreated, and insisted in vain. Once she did contrive to push him (6) away, but the boy had the greater pleasure in getting (7) upon her back again directly.

"Walter," said she, "get (8) down this moment. You are extremely troublesome. I am very angry with you."

"Walter," cried Charles Hayter, "why do you not do as you are bid? Do not you hear your aunt speak? Come to me, Walter, come to cousin Charles."

But not a bit did Walter stir.

In another moment, however, she found herself in the state of being released (9) from him; some one was taking him from her, though he had bent (10) down her head so much, that his little sturdy hands were unfastened from around her neck, and he was resolutely borne (11) away, before she knew that Captain Wentworth had done it.

Her sensations on the discovery made her perfectly speechless. She could not even thank him. She could only hang (12) over little Charles, with most disordered feelings. His kindness in stepping (13) forward to her relief, the manner, the silence in which it had passed, the little particulars of the circumstance, with the conviction soon forced (14) on her by the noise he was studiously making with the child, that he meant to avoid hearing her thanks, and rather sought to testify that her conversation was the last of his wants, produced such a confusion of varying, but very painful agitation, as she could not recover (15) from, till enabled by the entrance of Mary and the Miss Musgroves to make (16) over her little patient to their cares, and leave the room. She could not stay.
